FLEE WITHOUT CASH AFTER BLOWING SAFE

WILL CONTINUE

A daring attempt to rob the safe of the printing firm of C. A. Brewood, at 519 Thirteenth street, failed yesterday morning. After the safe had been shattered by an explosion of nitroglycerine the yeggmen became frightened and fied. W. H. Dunn, manager, told the police that nearly $2,000 in liberty bonds and cash in the safe were left intact.

Night Inspector Edward Weedon and Detective Sergeants Bradley and Embrey yesterday gave the opinion that the "job" was the police that nearly $2,000 in liberty bonds and cash in the safe were left intact.

Night Inspector Edward Weedon and Detective Sergeants Bradley and Embrey yesterday gave the opinion that the "job" was used to hold the explosive in place, and towels which were used to deaden the noise of the explosion, indicated the yeggs knew their business.

The work was done so quietly that a man next door to the store who was sitting up with a danger-ously ill patient falled to hear the report of the explosion. Police believe that the ringing of a time clock frightened off the intruders who thought that it was a burglar alarm.
